Since 1955 the California Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) has been protecting the Health, Safety and Welfare of the people of the State of California. ABC Peace Officers (830.2 PC) specialize in Alcohol, Vice and Narcotics Law Enforcement. All peace officers with the ABC start their law enforcement career as plainclothes investigators. These armed investigators perform full peace officer duties and work varied assignments including undercover investigations, high profile enforcement, task force operations and local law enforcement liaison. These various assignments are located throughout the state.

ABC offers a wide variety of law enforcement duties and responsibilities with a primary emphasis on plainclothes work. All enforcement activities, as well as numerous special assignments are to meet the need of public safety.

Investigators carry firearms, conduct criminal investigations, write citations for violations of the law, make physical arrests, and assume other aspects and roles of a California police officer. These investigators work in problem and community oriented policing roles in every city, community, and neighborhood throughout the state. Their proactive policing, liaison work, and community relations have been recognized nationally.

Special assignments are available within the Department and may include community and business relations, prevention education programs, local law enforcement liaison; various grant funded assignments and investigative units, special operations, and various multi agency narcotics and terrorism task forces.
